

A Season For Giving
By: Ella Vandenberg

With the Thanksgiving break just around the corner, many people take this as an opportunity to give back to those in need. Typically this is done through some form of community service. This year many SNC groups and organizations are also partaking in this tradition. It is a great way for the campus to engage with local community members.

Many of you have probably noticed the countless donation bins around campus and the social media posts that have appeared on your feed. All of these are promoting either donation or collection drives that go to people in need during the holiday season. What is unique about the current drives is that many of them are looking for a multitude of donations that are typically very easy for college students to acquire. Many of them are things you likely have in your dorm.

The drives are also service events for many of the clubs, so by supporting their cause you are also supporting their organization. Some of the main drives circulating right now are a hygiene drive by the Untouchables, a winter clothing drive organized by No Nonsense and a food drive put on by Oxfam. These drives are supporting wonderful organizations like the House of Hope and the Green Bay Boys and Girls Club.

The holiday season is a great time to engage with your community and many SNC groups are giving you a great opportunity to do just that. Nonetheless, if you miss this cycle of donations, there is never a shortage of donation drives on campus that you can participate in!
